

Time Warp Chapter Book

Chronological Order Cards

Copy the cards and laminate them for durability, if you wish. Cut out the cards and place them face up on a table. Students take turns putting the cards in chronological order. The player with the most cards in the correct order wins the game.

Uncle Hans explained to his nephew Franklin that he invented a time machine.

Uncle Hans demonstrated how his time machine worked by making himself disappear and then reappear in a different location.

Identical versions of Uncle Hans appeared out of thin air.

Uncle Hans realized that he must have pressed the repeat button by mistake.

Uncle Hans explained to Franklin and Tula that the time machine can only be used for brief visits—maybe 10 minutes in length.

Uncle Hans warned that there was great danger in changing the outcome of history.

Uncle Hans received a call from Franklin's mother telling him that one of his clones was at her house.

Franklin noticed that Uncle Hans left behind his time machine.

Unable to resist temptation, Franklin and Tula went back in time to warn Abraham Lincoln.

Time Warp Chapter Book Chronological Order Cards

Unfortunately, Lincoln did not believe Franklin and Tula.

John Wilkes Booth walked by waving a long knife and carrying a small pistol.

Lincoln was shot by Booth.

Tula and Franklin decided to jump ahead 100 years into the future.

The future was not a happy place. It was gray—a dull and featureless gray.

Franklin and Tula confessed to Uncle Hans that they went to the past and to the future.

Uncle Hans explained that Franklin and Tula didn't see "the" future. They saw "a" future.

Franklin and Tula understood that they could be an important factor in creating a better future.

Uncle Hans decided that he just might keep the "extra" Uncle Hans that peered at them owlshly.
